The tariff opportunities

Infinite Water Inc. & Infinite Complex, being 'glass half full' businesses looks at the action, which is expected to take effect this week, and includes a 25% duty on all imports from Mexico and most goods from Canada (except a 10% carve-out for crude oil), and an additional 10% tariff on Chinese goods imported into the United States.

Infinite Water Inc. & Infinite Complex understands that on the surface this seems to bring a negative impact on the prices of items imported from these countries. If looked closed and less personally...it's does not. The US has perceived that prices of goods are lower because they are imported from countries that pay lower wages to their employees. The critical items used by Americans, include fruits and vegetables, meat, gas, automobiles, electronics, toys, clothing, lumber, and beer and spirits. Infinite Water Inc. & Infinite Complex do not see these items having a critical impact. The US has always, and still does have the land capacity and labor force to produce just about all fruits and vegetables, even to the extent that rural areas can self-produce using modern vertical and indoor farming. The US imports of oil and gas from Canada last year was that country's top export to the US. The US has become more reliant on Canadian oil since the expansion of Canada's Trans Mountain pipeline. The US has the 10th largest oil reserves in the world. A 10% increase will not affect us more then the up and down prices we already experience. Infinite Water Inc. & Infinite Complex has looked at many photographs from the 1960's and what is noticeable is that 90% of all cars were manufactured in the USA. Today only 34% of cars in the US are actually made here. With technological manufacturing developments, this can be turned around. When it comes to computers and electronics we can see the US highest trade deficit. If there is to be a benefit to the new tariffs it will be in the US bringing back the chip industry to the US.

Infinite Water Inc. & Infinite Complex believes that the US can still be more exporter and less importer. Being self-sufficient is a good thing. Having more and better jobs is a good thing. Having higher quality standards is a good thing. So, unless you must have Modelo and Tequila along with avocados and more plastics, your life is about to get better.
